"Risk in Professional Practice – Understanding Professional Liability Insurance"

*by Philip A. Carson, Ph.D., Associate,
Miller Thomson LLP*

Sponsored by Westhoff Engineering Resources Inc.

Philip Carson will speak about the legal risks facing engineers in today's industry. He will talk about contractual and tort liability, the engineer's duty of care and common claims made against engineers. He will discuss different elements of risk management including professional practice management plans, contractual terms, and insurance.

In some cases, insuring the risk may be the last line of defence. Philip will talk about the scope of APEGGA insurance and private insurance, as well as various types of professional liability insurance. He will also give guidance on what to do if a claim is made against you.

Philip's practice is focused on commercial litigation and oil and gas law. He is a member of Miller Thomson's litigation group serving a wide variety of clients, including private, corporate, industrial and institutional organizations.

Philip has appeared as counsel at the Court of Queen's Bench and Provincial Court and has participated in several mediations. He has a strong academic and diverse business background, and has held technical and management positions in the petrochemical, waste management and oil and gas industries.
