Dr. Manuel Hulliger, Professor, Clinical Neurosciences, University of Calgary

Presenting to the

Calgary History of Medicine Society

“The Edwin Smith papyrus and the first reported cases of aphasia after fronto-temporal brain injury”

This papyrus is an incomplete 1700 BCE copy of an earlier ancient Egyptian treatment manual describing various injuries and ailments, written around 3000 BCE. What makes the document exceptional is the remarkable objectivity of the clinical descriptions, the strict separation of observation and interpretation, and the absence of dogma invoking divine powers or untested theories.
