

Emily Macphail is a MD/MSc. student at the University of Calgary (Class of 2020), where she also previously earned a BHSc. (hons.) in biomedical science. She began her exploration into medical and healthcare humanities during her first degree, and has a strong interest in medical student wellness and mental health. She is heavily involved in extracurricular activities within and outside of the university, including as a student member of the CPSA Physician Health Monitoring Committee and as National Wellness Officer for the Canadian Federation of Medical Students.

2017