

WHAT FAMILIES CAN DO

THE 3 R'S OF SUPPORT

Access to resources, such as childcare and mental health supports, can reduce stress (physical, mental, and emotional), enable job stability, and facilitate skill development to help people grow.

Establishing routines, including sleep habits, meal times, school, sport and art activities, reduces decision making fatigue, which frees the brain to make complex decisions. In turn, this helps children, youth, and adults thrive.

Positive relationships can increase the hormone oxytocin, providing a sense of well-being. Social connections normalize experiences, increase belonging, and improve mood.
