WELCOME

Welcome to UCalgary Continuing Education: the preferred learner-centered institution for life-long learning. An institution whose mission is to empower people and transform communities for a better future.

This course offers opportunities to deepen your knowledge about what to expect when taking courses online from UCalgary Continuing Education and the skills needed to be a successful online learner.

This is an actionable course. That is, you will be invited to complete activities aimed at developing your online learning plan. A plan you will use and refer to before, during, and after taking online courses. Let's take a closer look. There are four modules in the course. Each module centers on one of the four digital skills needed to learn online, as well as study skills, time management skills, and independent learning skills.

The course is designed to offer you flexibility. You can take the course following the order of the modules, you can start with the module you feel would help you the most and go from there, or you can take the orientation survey which will suggest an order for you to take the course based on your digital skills strengths and areas of opportunity.

There is no right or wrong as to how to go about covering the modules in the course. The way you choose to cover the content will be the best way for you. It is recommended you cover the content of a module in the order it is presented. This is because you will benefit the most by completing the activities and knowledge checks as you go.

Finally, the course is complete when you take a moment to test your knowledge. Take the quiz at the end of each module to evaluate your understanding of the content. Now it is time to start your new learning adventure!

Happy learning!
